From tropical islands to remote coastal villages, many beautiful destinations around the world. In many cases, these islands are endowed with several renewable resource alternatives, primarily wind and solar, and waste-to-energy but in some cases including geothermal. The high cost of fossil fuel makes the economics of a wholesale shift to a renewable energy much more clear than it can be in. The archipelago's energy supply comes from hydropower generated in mainland Washington and Oregon, transmitted by aging submarine cables that cross the Salish Sea to serve 20 islands. If you have any questions or concerns please. Most islands rely on imported fossil fuels, creating a perfect storm of: Vulnerability to shipping disruptions (remember the 2021 Suez Canal blockage?)

) Now here's the kicker: Islands get 30% more annual sunlight than Germany- the world's solar leader. So why aren't we leveraging that?
